BETTER REVISION

The weeks and days leading up to exams can be challenging for students. So how can students revise better? Which techniques really work, and which don't? What can students do to improve their memory, mood and concentration? Read on to find out what the research says.

1. Eat breakfast

It is estimated that around 27% of boys and 39% of girls skip breakfast some or all of the time. It's not called the most important meal of the day for nothing: research has found that skipping this meal significantly reduces students' attention and their ability to recall information.

2. Put your phone away

This should be an obvious one, but for many it isn't. Phones can be distracting; they are linked to fomo (fear of missing out), and evidence shows that students who spend more time texting and using social media get lower grades.

3. Start early and spread it out

Actors don't leave their rehearsals until the day before opening night. Athletes don't only train the day before a match. To commit something to memory takes time.

4. Test yourself

Leading researchers in the field of memory consider testing yourself as one of the most effective ways to improve your ability to recall information. Testing yourself also helps you check for any gaps in your knowledge. Practice papers provide a good starting point, as well as quizzing yourself at the end of your revision session.

5. Teach someone

After you have tested yourself, teach the material to someone else. This has been found to help aid memory and recall: it is known as "the Protégé Effect". Teaching someone else requires you to learn and organise your knowledge in a clear and structured manner

6. Think twice about using highlighters
Despite being the favourite weapon of many students tackling revision, research suggests they don't work very well.

7. Don't listen to music
Students who study in a quiet environment can recall more than those who revise while listening to music.

8. Get some fresh air and exercise
You cannot work all day, every day. Nor should you. Revision has to be about quality, as well as quantity. Going outside and getting some fresh air helps people feel refreshed and better able to focus afterwards. Furthermore, doing a little bit of exercise helps people deal better with stressful situations: it reduces anxiety and increases self-esteem.

9. Sleep
Students are encouraged to work hard and revise a lot before their exams: however, there comes a time when they need to stop and go to sleep. Knowing when can be tricky.

THE BIG DAY

The day of the exam can be stressful. Here are some top tips to help you cope so that you perform in the exam to the best of your ability.

1. Eat sensibly before an exam. Slow release energy foods such as porridge and bananas are great. Avoid sugary foods which give you an instant burst of energy but then leave you feeling flat part way through the exam.
2. Stay hydrated. Students who drink water before the exam are known to perform better than those who are dehydrated.
3. Go to the toilet before you get to the exam. That way you are more comfortable in the exam.
4. Arrive on time for the exam and check your seat number.
5. Avoid those people who are going to wind you up or stress you out.
6. Focus your mind and get into the zone, this is serious.
7. If you feel yourself getting nervous, try some deep breaths and remind yourself of how hard you have prepared for the exam.
8. Follow the instructions of the invigilator about where to put bags, coats and phones. Make sure that you are in the correct seat.

9. Read the instructions on the front of the exam paper. If you are unsure ask the invigilator.
10. Answer all the questions you are supposed to. Don't leave blanks. Blanks = 0 marks.
11. Keep an eye on the clock so that you have enough time to complete the paper.
